

How to be a graphic designer, without losing your soul

Contents

- / p.6–8
Foreword Stefan Sagmeister
- / p.9–16
Introduction 'What is this book about?' Who it's aimed at – What it offers – Its philosophy – The author – What's the difference between this and other graphic design books?
- Chapter 1 / p.17–27
Attributes needed by the modern designer 'Graphic design is for self-centred obsessives' A discussion of the main creative, philosophical and practical attributes required by the contemporary graphic designer.
- Chapter 2 / p.30–43
How to find a job 'I want a job where I have lots of freedom and get to do award-winning stuff' A list of employment options – Work in a studio or work in-house for a firm? – The advantages of 'apprenticeship' – Where to look for a job – How to approach studios – Do's and don'ts – Interview techniques – The personal portfolio – What do employers really want?
- Chapter 3 / p.47–53
Being freelance 'I want to work for myself by myself' Setting up on your own – Benefits – Pitfalls – What sort of clients employ freelance designers? – Working from home or renting a studio – Sharing space – How to get work.
- Chapter 4 / p.58–69
Setting up a studio 'I want to run my own studio. I like doing tax calculations and eighteen-hour days' Benefits – Pitfalls – Partners – Creating a business plan – Professional advisers – Finding premises – Choosing a name – Creating an identity – Studio systems.
- Chapter 5 / p.73–83
Running a studio 'I want to run a world-famous studio, do great work and make lots of money' Employing creative staff – Spotting talent – Employing non-creative staff – The importance of receptionists – Cultivating a studio philosophy.
- Chapter 6 / p.88–97
Winning new work 'I always need more work, and why does someone else always get the good jobs?' New business and how to promote yourself – New business strategies – Dedicated new-business person – Finding clients – The studio portfolio – Websites – Promotional material.

Contents

- Chapter 7 / p.103–111
Clients 'All clients are bad' Client psychology – Dealing with client expectations – Dealing with an unhappy client – How to spot a time-waster – Keeping clients – Nurturing clients – Sacking clients – The presentation.
- Chapter 8 / p.119–129
Self-promotion 'I don't want to be famous, I just want my peers to like what I do' Cultivating a reputation – Work done for the portfolio, not the bank balance – Design competitions – Professional organizations – Attending lectures and events – Maintaining relationships with art colleges – Dealing with the press.
- Chapter 9 / p.134–147
The creative process 'I want to do great work, but sometimes my work isn't as good as I'd like it to be' The creative process – How to approach a new project – How to interpret the brief – Research – Process – Benefits of collaboration – Having a personal creative philosophy – Criteria for good work – How to be a graphic designer.
- / p.148–151
Bibliography
- / p.152–158
Appendix Organizations – Business matters – Conferences – Internet resources – Designers – Cultural awareness.
- / p.159–160
Acknowledgements
- / Throughout the book
Interviews Neville Brody, Natalie Hunter, Rudy VanderLans, John Warwicker, Angela Lorenz, Alexander Gelman, Andy Cruz, Kim Hiorthøy, Peter Stemmler, Corey Holms